Four held over police corruption

Four police officers have been arrested on suspicion of corruption, according to Scotland Yard.

One woman and three men are being held after two separate investigations following tip-offs from colleagues.

Three are attached to CID units in Tower Hamlets, east London, and the fourth was working away from the units.

The allegations range from a "corrupt relationship" with a suspected criminal, to misconduct and conspiracy to pervert the course of justice.

A 44-year-old man from Dagenham, east London, has also been arrested.

Lawrence case 'corruption' probe

An investigation is being launched over claims that police corruption helped shield the killers of black teenager Stephen Lawrence from conviction.

A BBC investigation alleges that the murder inquiry's Det Sgt John Davidson was paid by drug smuggler Clifford Norris, father of suspect David Norris.

Stephen Lawrence was attacked at a bus stop in 1993

Police chief criticises 'leak' Pc

Derbyshire Police's Assistant Chief Constable said she was "incredibly disappointed" one of her staff leaked details in a case where a man died.

Bernard Gilbert, 79, died minutes after a brick was thrown into his home.

The brick went through a bedroom window in the bungalow

Pc Steven Smith illegally passed on Mr Gilbert's address to the men who planned and carried out the attack.

Mark Forbes, 40, of Kedleston Close, Ripley, and younger brother Steven, 22, of Gladstone Street, South Normanton, were found guilty of manslaughter.

Pc Smith found the address by looking up Mr Gilbert's registration number on the Police National Computer.

He was fined £1,200 under the Data Protection Act and resigned from the force.
