Robert Madeline's wife, Kate, had been locked in her room. Despite the fact that she was in the room, she was not seen by anyone who was in the room with her.

But the Daily Express was not the only newspaper to report on the case. The Daily Mail also reported on the case, and the Daily Telegraph also reported on the case.

The Daily Mail reported that the police had searched the room and found no evidence. The Daily Telegraph reported that the police had searched the room and found no evidence.

Kidnapper 'was hiding in apartment'

From Martha Evans and David Mitchell in Praia da Luz.

It was not long after the abduction that the police discovered that the kidnapper was hiding in an apartment. The police searched the apartment and found evidence of the abduction.

The police searched the apartment and found evidence of the abduction. The police searched the apartment and found evidence of the abduction.

DRUGS TEST

The results of toxicology tests which could prove Madeline was given a fatal overdose of medicine will be known in days.

Forensic experts have spent weeks carrying out painstaking analysis of key traces of DNA discovered in the McCann's apartment and her car.

Among the samples collected was a sample of hair thought to be Madeline's. Samples at the Forensic Science Service laboratory in Birmingham have tested the hair for any traces of drugs in the system.

The results are expected to be handed to Portuguese police in days. Detectives believe Kate suddenly killed her daughter, possibly with an overdose of medicine to help her sleep.

Either charge us or clear our name

KATE and Gerry McCann now believe they would be better off being charged over Madeline's disappearance, a Portuguese police official says.

It is the clearest sign yet of the family's growing frustration at the inquests and rumors being leveled against them from the Portuguese police.

A source close to the McCann legal team said the time had come for the case against them to be brought into the open. But he admitted that lawyers working on the case believe there is little hope of an early resolution.

"The bill is in the Ponta da Judicatura court," he said. "They either need to put up or shut up."

Formerly the McCanns are angry that so much police time is being concentrated on them and away from the hunt for Madeline. This they are backed up by the McCann legal team.

In a further development, top-tier Portuguese lawyer Rogério Alves has now joined the so-called Team McCann.

Parents' attitude 'held up inquiry'

A SENIOR Portuguese police officer has criticized Kate and Gerry McCann for refusing to answer key questions about their daughter's disappearance.

Officer Alvaro, president of the Portuguese Police Prosecution, accused them of holding up the inquiry and claimed the couple's case had not been made easy by the McCann's attitude.

He said: "There is no sense in scheduling police investigations because Kate and Gerry have said they will answer no more questions."

"They are applying (some) of a state that allows them to be cited and they have a strategy and they will make no more statements."

"The McCann's attitude is a difficulty and complicates our investigation by the presence of the parents who have not decided to help the investigation."

But the couple denied that they were refusing to cooperate and said they were willing to return to Portugal. The judge stated that the case had ended police permission to re-interview the McCanns.
